Investment Philosophy

Our investment approach is to identify quality businesses with the best potential for consistent growth. We look for companies with an enduring competitive advantage that gives them the potential for above average growth, but selling at a reasonable price in an industry that we understand. We are not short-term market timers, but instead are long-term investors who make our buying and selling decisions on changes affecting a company's business model and the risk-reward ratio for a particular investment. Returns are enhanced through low turnover resulting in high tax efficiency for taxable accounts.

Christopher Phillips

Business Development Consultant

Dr. Christopher Phillips has had a passion for investment at least since taking an extracurricular course on the subject decades ago when he was an undergraduate student at the College of William & Mary, where he received a BA in Government. In a classroom competition, Chris was allotted $10,000 to invest in stocks over the course of the academic year, and parlayed that into nearly a quadruple gain — garnering him first place. He comes by this honestly; his father, an electrical engineer and high ranking supervisor with the Department of the Navy, moonlighted in mutual fund sales, stocks and life insurance. Though Chris was accepted into the MBA program in the prestigious Darden School of Business at the University of Virginia, he instead pursued a career as a writer — but never lost his passion for the world of investing.

Chris did eventually go on to earn advanced degrees in the Natural Sciences, in Education, and in the Humanities, and a PhD in Communications. And he fulfilled his dream of becoming a successful writer. He has authored of a number of acclaimed books, including the bestsellers ‘Socrates Cafe: A Fresh Taste of Philosophy,’ and ‘Six Questions of Socrates: A Modern-Day Journey of Discovery through World Philosophy.’ Chris is founder of the nonprofit Democracy Cafe (www.DemocracyCafe.org), and has launched an array of inquiry initiatives, including Socrates Cafe, which has resonated the world over. He has also been a senior fellow at the National Constitution Center, an ethics fellow at Harvard University, and a senior writing and research fellow at University of Pennsylvania, where he developed an taught a widely appealing course on ‘Money and Democracy.’ Chris also is the 2012 recipient of the Distinguished American Leadership Award.

A fluent Spanish speaker, Chris' aims as a registered Investment Advisor Representative with Martin Capital include helping serve Spanish-speaking clients, among others, and to further collaborate on a variety of projects, including developing ever more effective communications and diversified investment strategies. More information about Chris can be had at www.ChristopherPhillips.com.
